VIRTUAL CONFERENCE INFORMATION

Registration

Due to the need for customized logins for our virtual event, pre-registration was required. All registrants should have received their login details via e-mail no later than three business days prior to the event. Pre-registration was available through 1 July 2021.

FAQ & Support

A TEST LINK was made available to all registrants 27 June-3 July 2021, with an opportunity to contact the production company for support if needed. During the virtual conference, there is a FAQ page available at <https://www.presentationsoft.com/webcast1/support.html>. The support e-mail address is HERE.

Navigation/On-demand Recordings

When you first log in, you will find yourself on a page with the Agenda for the ENTIRE EVENT – all three dates. Think of this as the Lobby. There is a tab for each date, and a listing of virtual meeting rooms across the top of the agenda. There are separate tabs for the Plenary, Blitz/Roundtable, and Social Session rooms, listing these types of sessions for the entire event on each of those tabs. For the panel sessions, within a given date, click on a room number to enter the virtual meeting room, or click on the link for a Plenary, Blitz/Roundtable, or Social Session at the time that session is live. Sessions will be running concurrently. When you enter a virtual meeting room, you will be viewing whatever is broadcasting in that room live, at that moment. You can click on “Home” in the upper right of the screen to return to the Lobby. We recommend that you keep your browser window fully expanded; making it smaller might cause some elements on the page to become displaced and overlap. Chrome is the recommended browser to use, but any web browser will work. Please reference the User Guides made available to everyone with audience and presenter/Chair/Moderator instructions and screen shots for full details.

All sessions are being recorded, except for Social Sessions, and if you miss any sessions, they will be available on-demand the following day, until 31 August 2021. You will need your conference login credentials to access the on-demand material.

Questions?

The ISPP staff is available for questions M-F, 9:00 AM – 5:30 PM (UTC-4). Please e-mail us with any inquiries.

July 2021 Welcome to the Global ISPP Conference!

Dear Colleagues:

It is my great honor to welcome you to ISPP's annual scientific meeting. Our minds and hearts are open to one another even if our hands and faces cannot be.

Though I am sorry not to be able to meet you in person this year, there are two big benefits of our online conference (a) You do not have to listen to me ruin the beauty of languages to greet you: Bienvenue, Nau mai haere mai, Welcome, and (b) We have attendees from more countries (58) than ever this year!

At the Business Meeting and Awards Ceremony, we will share more news, but allow me to highlight some new conference features, and briefly introduce ISPP to first-time attendees.

Past President Nick Valentino, Executive Director Sev Bennett, 2020 program chairs Thomas Craemer and Lily Mason, GC members, and respondents to the September, 2020 survey informed us about how we could improve the 2021 conference based on the 2020 conference experience. We realize that at some point it might be ideal to have hybrid virtual-and-in-person conferences and we are keeping an eye out for when that might be cost-effective; it still is not. However, the 2021 conference is being held over many hours per day in 3 time zones. Plus, since registered attendees can hear the talks through the end of August, you don't even have to see all of them live! If you want to get in touch with other attendees after the conference, those who have given permission have their names, affiliations, and emails will be included in a listing available via the conference app. We learned that many people wanted more chances to get to know others and network, so this year's conference has several scheduled chat rooms. Some are themed, based on responses to registration preferences, but other chat rooms are meant to simulate happenstance meetings at a reception or in a hallway – and you can ask friends to meet you in them too. Hopefully we will all enjoy the informal human interaction! Do you want to find out how other parent-scholars kept themselves and their children off the ceiling this past year? Need advice about a complicated method or language or theory? Want to find out who is humorous in person? Need to learn what people have figured out since you were in graduate school? Stop in! Both newcomers and experienced people want to meet one another. Bringing a drink, snack, child, or statistical problem is optional.

ISPP has always been diverse internationally and in the disciplines, methods, topics, and approaches that we use. Moreover, given its founding by a woman, who invited scholars from several countries to establish ISPP, many of whom

WELCOME LETTER

From the President

are good mentors, ISPP has always involved students and both women and men in leadership. Our Early Career Committee is among the most vibrant groups in ISPP, organizing social and mentoring events within the conference, between conferences, writing a wonderful newsletter, among other activities. In the past several years, Governing Council (GC) members have been working to ensure greater inclusion. Every ISPP Committee now has a diversity advocate. We invite abstracts for the journals in multiple languages and are posting more non-English language content on our website. A family-friendly conference committee is among other groups who put questions in our recent survey to find out what ISPP members need and want. We have become stronger advocates for ISPP members under threat due to domestic or international political situations and the twinning and grant programs many of you support have enriched relationships among members. The ISPP Ambassadors have been helping me to understand the situations, skills, and needs of scholars in various locations and we are developing useful materials to respond to those (and hosting some chat rooms). Our surveys this year will help the GC know how else the Society can serve you.

From attending ISPP conferences, I have been privileged to learn about political systems and political problems people face that were not taught in my formal education. I have often thought to myself that a good number of contemporary political problems, from corruption to anti-racism, to Great Power conflicts to oppression, to slavery to greenhouse gas pollution are inimically aspects of the world still trying to figure out how to de-colonize. Acknowledging my ignorance and my status as a citizen of a colonial nation (which, if you feel are correlated, fair point), I thought it would be especially important to feature the perspectives of Indigenous Peoples in political psychology. Since we were unable to be directly involved in thanking the Indigenous people whose home is Montreal, perhaps this is a good time for all of us who live in colonized places to acknowledge the original inhabitants and their legacies. I'm very grateful to Program Co-Chairs, Drs. Carla Houkamou and Allison Harrell, for their creative and thoughtful framing of our theme and for inviting our excellent keynote speakers and Indigenous scholars from several continents to participate. To first-time attendees, we offer a special welcome and invitation to meet new and old GC members. To old-timers like me, I extend my nostalgic welcome. To all of you, thank you for participating and for making ISPP the place that welcomes all with open hearts and open minds.

Felicia Pratto
ISPP President

WELCOME TO THE 44th ANNUAL MEETING OF THE INTERNATIONAL SOCIETY OF POLITICAL PSYCHOLOGY!

Bonjour chères participantes, chers participants (hello dear participants). Tēnā koutou, tēnā koutou, tēnā koutou katoa (greetings, greetings, greetings to you all).

As program co-chairs, we warmly welcome you to this virtual Annual Meeting of the International Society of Political Psychology.

As a community of international scholars in political psychology and allied fields, dispersed throughout all regions of the world, it is essential we remain connected and come together each year to communicate across boundaries, generate and disseminate research and ideas. Our 2021 conference was initially planned as a face-to-face event in Montreal, Canada; however, because COVID-19 created such deep uncertainty, the decision was made to take the conference online. It is a testament to the virtues of technology that we can still connect meaningfully on this virtual platform - and bring together speakers from a wide range of countries, disciplines, and career stages. We are proud to bring you an exciting conference format with exceptional keynotes, papers, panels, blitzes, and roundtables – all scheduled live in multiple time zones, including Asia and Oceania.

While this conference will be held while participants are based all over the world, we want to recognize that the original conference site was planned on the traditional, unceded territories of the Kanien'kehá:ka Nation. Tiohtià:ke/Montreal has long been a site of meeting and exchange for Indigenous peoples, and we are grateful for the opportunity to hold a virtual meeting that will allow, we hope, dialogue and learning across those from many difference countries, nations and peoples from across the globe. Despite the virtual nature of the meeting, we also recognize and honour the Kanien'kehá:ka as the traditional custodians of the lands and waters in our original host city.

To ISPP members, conference newcomers, presenters, and audiences who join from multiple disciplines and locations, we thank all of you for supporting ISPP – your contributions are the foundations of this conference. Your support is even more valued given the unprecedented challenges ushered in by COVID-19, which has closed universities throughout the world and impacted conference funding and research continuity.

Keynotes and the conference theme

The pandemic, and its disproportionate effect on individuals from marginalized backgrounds, has exacerbated inequalities and political unrest, underlining the importance of political processes and structures for protecting citizens. Discussions of inequality and justice are accelerating, and there is intense worldwide interest in how political leaders use (or misuse) research to guide their decisions.

WELCOME LETTER

From 2021 Program Chairs

The conference theme – Recognition and (Re)claiming Spaces: Marginalization, Colonization, and Privilege – is more apt than ever.

Our three keynotes set the tone for ISPP this year, weaving together a diverse range of insights to amplify our conference's theme.

We are delighted that President Felicia Pratto will deliver the timely and highly topical opening Presidential address titled "Why Political Psychology (and ISPP) Benefit from Including Work (and Members) from Varieties of Political Systems, Positions and Locations, Political Cultures, Theories, and Methods".

Dr. Paula D. McClain, James B. Duke Distinguished Professor of Political Science and a Professor of Public Policy at Duke University and expert in racial minority group politics, particularly inter-minority political and social competition and urban politics, will deliver a keynote titled "Diversifying the Pipeline in Political Science: How Increasing Representation Makes for Better Science".

We also welcome Dr. Jeffrey Ansloos, Registered Psychologist and Assistant Professor of Indigenous Health and Social Policy in the Department of Applied Psychology and Human Development at the Ontario Institute for Studies in Education. His keynote, "Beyond Recognition, Towards Abolition: Indigenous Theories of Change and Justice in Psychology", speaks directly to issues of colonization and privilege – a key conference theme.

New Zealand Māori clinical psychologist Dr. Waikaremoana Waitoki, President of the New Zealand Psychological Society and Senior Research Fellow in the Māori Psychology Research Unit at the University of Waikato, also joins us this year. She closes this year's conference by sharing her ground-breaking research in advancing Indigenous perspectives in psychology with "Indigenizing Psychology: Claiming a Kaupapa Māori Space".

We hope our panels and roundtables will encourage engagement and dialogue between researchers, particularly those typically unrepresented at ISPP. These include two interactive roundtables sessions titled "Indigenous PhDs in a Rapidly Changing Higher Education Environment" and "Indigenous Experiences Navigating Colonial Spaces in Academia". We have also organized a roundtable focused on how researchers in privileged positions can engage in research with and about under-represented communities, titled 'Nothing about us without us': the challenges of insider-outsider research.

WELCOME LETTER
From 2021 Program Chairs

Additional roundtables address pressing political and social issues, including “What Can Political Psychology Offer as We Face the Challenge of COVID-19?” and the “The Impact of the Covid-19 Pandemic on Researchers’ Early Careers.”

Submissions and the online platform

We received 605 submissions this year. The papers submitted showcase the valuable work our members continue to pursue, engaging in dynamic, collaborative research activities across regions throughout the world. The “registration only” option this year has enabled us to welcome even more attendees. ISPP has always championed diverse perspectives, and one of the greatest benefits of relocating the conference online is that it is now accessible to a much larger and more diverse audience. People from some regions are not always best placed to attend ISPP due to the expense of travel and the time required, so we hope this year, by moving online, we have removed some of the barriers associated with travel to ensure the conference is genuinely more inclusive.

Online environments also provide the chance to re-imagine new ways to promote interaction. The mentoring luncheon remains part of the 2021 conference. This will provide a platform for one-on-one meetings between early career scholars and leading academics and researchers in their field. We also plan to offer an informal series of meet and greets for specific groups, including regional ambassadors, Indigenous and minority scholars, and early career researchers, Scholars Under Threat as well as discussion with the editors of the society’s journals.

In looking at the program, please keep in mind that every session will be occurring live at one time. We provide the time in both CET, EDT and CST time zones for easier reference, but those who live in other time zones can also join these panels (adjusting for their own time).

We suggest using an online world clock (such as www.worldtimebuddy.com) to keep track of conference events in your time zone. To ensure attendees do not miss out on all that the conference offers, sessions will also be recorded and made available to watch on-demand, starting the following day and for at least six weeks after the event has occurred.

All those who contributed to organizing the conference: Thank you

Organizing this conference has not been easy, but it has been made possible by the hard work and commitment of all those in the background working tirelessly to ensure the success of this event. We thank the ISSP Central Office team for their support, particularly Sev Bennett (Executive Director) and Heather Schlabach (Executive Administrator), who both dedicated a huge amount of time and energy supporting us with the program’s administration.

WELCOME LETTER

From 2021 Program Chairs

We are deeply grateful to ISPP President Professor Felicia Pratto, who has been so supportive leading into the conference, providing guidance, leadership, and advice. She generously supported our proactive engagement with underrepresented scholars and PhDs, including donating her own Presidential funding to promote Indigenous student engagement. Her gracious accommodation of our suggestions and ideas throughout all stages of planning was reassuring – and made our job much easier. Thank you so much, Felicia!

Our Section Chairs deserve special mention for the huge amount of time and energy they dedicated to reviewing each section. Thank you to Lara Greaves and Danny Osborne (University of Auckland); Philip Gordon Chen (Beloit College); Sanne Rijkhoff (Texas A&M University–Corpus Christi); Andreas Zick (Bielefeld University); Martijn van Zomeren and Yasin Koc (University of Groningen); Kaiping Zhang (Tsinghua University); Gilda Senses (Sapienza University of Rome); Hakeem Jefferson (Stanford University); Paul Kowert (University of Massachusetts); Lene Aarøe (Aarhus University); Fiona Barlow and Michael Thai (University of Queensland); and Davide Morselli (University of Lausanne).

We hope you will take the time to share your experiences with ISPP via our Twitter account @PoIPsyISPP and well as your own social media.

Lastly, we are very grateful for the opportunity to plan ISPP 2021 and have enjoyed working together as a team – we hope you have a great time at this conference!

Ngā mihi nui, Kind regards

Carla Houkamau, University of Auckland, New Zealand
Allison Harell, Université du Québec à Montréal, Canada
2021 Program Co-Chairs

EARLY CAREER COMMITTEE WELCOME 2021

Dear Colleagues:

On behalf of the Early Career Committee (ECC), I give you a warm welcome to the second virtual meeting of the International Society of Political Psychology (ISPP). This is the 44th annual meeting of ISPP, and we look forward to welcoming you to the various virtual events scheduled over the next few days.

In our virtual format, the ECC continues to hold a number of exciting events for our early career scholars to attend during the annual meeting. We hope that these virtual 'meet-ups' will pave the way for future in-person meetings and collaborations.

First, our Mentoring Luncheon Coordinators (Xiaowen Xu and Nina Spälti) have recruited a dedicated team of mentors from a range of diverse personal and professional backgrounds. Each mentor will be meeting with a small group of early career scholars for our traditional Mentoring Luncheon. The 'luncheon' will be held via Skype, Zoom, etc. – and not necessarily at lunchtime for anyone. During this session, the early career scholars who had registered for this activity will have the opportunity to discuss topics of their choosing, e.g., their research, teaching, funding, other career dynamics, with mentors in their respective areas.

Second, our Professional Development Coordinators (Henriette Müller and Jasper Van Assche) have organized three roundtable sessions relevant to the challenges of early career scholars. One will be focused on the severe "Impact of the Covid-19 Pandemic on Researchers' Early Careers" in terms of research, secure job positions, funding, and other important matters. A select group of panelists will join the attendees in discussing and reflecting on these issues. A second roundtable will address the timeless question of how to turn one's dissertation into publications ("The Dissertation is Done, Now What?"). Editors of Political Psychology and Advances in Political Psychology will offer invaluable advice on the process and related issues such as how dissertation publications are viewed by tenure committees. The third and last roundtable addresses a wide range of topics related to the "Opportunities and Challenges during Career Trajectories". This panel will bring together scholars from different stages of their careers to provide a unique selection of experience and wisdom that taps different needs of our early career community. Please mark these events in your calendars, we look forward to seeing you in the virtual rooms! Thank you, Henriette and Jasper, for this great selection of topics and bringing together a truly wonderful team of experts! (Please note that we will not have our traditional "Elevator Pitch" workshop this year. For those interested, we will hopefully continue the tradition in the next conference.)

WELCOME LETTER

From Early Career Committee Chair

We also encourage you to follow ISPP's social media accounts during the meeting and use the hashtag #ISPP2021 to share your experience, research findings from your work and those of others. The ECC social media accounts will continue to keep you apprised of key events, as well as interesting panels and roundtables. Follow us on Twitter (@PolPsyISPP), "like" us on the ISPP Facebook page (facebook.com/PolPsyISPP), or connect with us on LinkedIn (<https://www.linkedin.com/in/intlsocpolpsych/>) to stay up-to-date regarding upcoming calls for papers and funding opportunities. In addition, you can also visit our Medium account (@PolPsyISPP) where our Web Resources Coordinators (Felipe Vilanova and Jessica Small) will be publishing articles written by early career scholars in the coming weeks. As always, we appreciate any comments, advice, or feedback on how we can improve. Email us at ecc@ispp.org.

I would like to extend my thanks to our Chair-Elect, Julie Wronski for her willingness to help and support me this past year. I look forward to seeing what she will accomplish as Chair next year! I also thank our Newsletter Editors, Stacey Heath and Amena Amer, for providing us with two fantastic issues. If you haven't read them yet, I would strongly encourage you to check out the insightful contributions in the newsletters, available on the ISPP website. Our Web Resources Coordinators, Felipe and Jessica, have done a great job of keeping our social media active with science articles, news, calls, and blog articles that highlighted the great research conducted by Latin American political psychologists. Finally, I thank all 2020-2021 Early Career Committee officers for their hard work and dedication in this extremely challenging year with competing demands on their time. It has been an honor to serve with you.

We bid farewell to Thia Sagherian-Dickey, Xiaowen Xu, Stacey Heath, Jessica Small, and Felipe Vilanova, as they come to the end of their tenure on the ECC. Thank you so much for your service!

I wish everyone an engaging and rewarding conference!

Fiona Barlow, University of Queensland, Australia

Michael Thai, University of Queensland, Australia

12. New Theoretical and Methodological Developments

Davide Morselli, University of Lausanne, Switzerland

13. Annual Meeting Panels, Roundtables, Symposia, Keynotes, Business Meetings, and Social Events

Panel Sessions

Panel sessions are made up of 3 to 5 papers. Authors on these panels will have 10 to 15 minutes to present their paper live during the session. Your materials will automatically appear when it is your time to speak according to the order of papers in the program. You can advance through your presentation materials using the arrow keys on your laptop or computer. Audience members are not visible to presenters or each other, but are able to use a chat function to pose questions to the panel.

Roundtable Sessions

Roundtables provide a space for up to 5 presenters to discuss a theme or topic. These sessions are more interactive than panels, and both presenters and audience members are visible and able to speak (if they choose to have their camera and microphone enabled). The Chairs of roundtables will facilitate discussion and call on speakers and audience to participate.

Blitz Sessions

Blitz (lightning-fast) sessions are meeting spaces for 6-8 presenters to discuss pre-recorded videos. Each Blitz participant will be expected to watch all other videos from their session ahead of time, and a designated moderator will facilitate discussion among panelists and audience members during the scheduled session. The pre-recorded videos should be no longer than 5 minutes and include no more than 4 slides. Both presenters and audience members are visible and able to speak (if they choose to have their camera and microphone enabled).

Social Sessions

This year we are incorporating social sessions into the conference program. These sessions are meant to encourage networking and conversations between participants. There are two conference-wide social sessions entitled, "Conference-Wide Speed Greeting" (30 minutes each), open to all attendees and where participants will have an opportunity to chat in small groups with other attendees. We will also have meet-and-greet social sessions targeted at certain attendees (i.e., first-time attendees; scholars from Africa; parent scholars, etc.). These are longer sessions (80 minutes) and attendees are welcome to drop in. A host is assigned to each of these events and can facilitate discussion and/or randomly assign participants to breakout rooms for smaller groups.

IN MEMORIAM

Emile Bruneau

With great sadness, we acknowledge the October, 2020 death of our colleague, Dr. Emile Bruneau, of a brain tumor. Emile embodied virtues as a person and a scholar-activist that many of us strive for: international and interdisciplinary research, persistent curiosity, scientific imagination and systematic research, wonderful mentoring and collaboration, positivity, humor, and compassion for his intimates, students, friends, and even for people engaged in intergroup conflict that wounded others.

GC member Nour Kteily, and one of Emile's several collaborators, contributed this remembrance:

Emile Bruneau's guiding mission—and he was certainly a man on a mission—was to “put science to work for peace.” Emile's doctoral training was in cellular and molecular neuroscience, but his life's passion was to use the tools of social and political psychology to improve intergroup relations. A trademark of his research program was identifying a barrier to peace, and then working—often with partners ‘on the ground’ around the world—to develop evidence-based interventions to help increase tolerance. His postdoctoral research explored intergroup empathy, examining when and why we express empathy parochially to members of ingroups versus outgroups, and uncovering mechanisms (such as the use of individuating narratives) to attenuate this bias. Shining a spotlight on the role of power, he showed that whereas high-power groups benefit from perspective-taking interventions, low-power groups benefit more from having the opportunity to give their perspective. In subsequent work, he examined the causes and consequences of blatant forms of dehumanization, including research that showed that dehumanization is in part facilitated by the meta-perception that one's own group is dehumanized by others. Indeed, Emile was fascinated by the tendency for metaperceptions to be unduly negative, identifying false polarization—our proclivity to believe that we are more divided and despised than we actually are—as an opportunity for corrective interventions. Emile was particularly excited by the power of what he called ‘intervention tournaments,’ sourcing ideas for and then testing a large number of interventions to see what was most effective and then investigating why. This approach yielded an intervention he was especially proud of, a ‘collective blame hypocrisy’ intervention that reliably reduced anti-Muslim bias by gently highlighting individuals’ tendency to collectively blame outgroups but not their own group for the condemnable actions of individual group members. Fittingly, one of Emile’s final projects (soon to be published) was an intervention tournament based on video stimuli generated from interviews he conducted with former FARC members at demobilization camp in rural Colombia to overcome barriers to re-integration and lasting peace. Emile’s work will leave an indelible mark on political psychology—and the world.

Another ISPP member friend, Anca Minescu, shared that there are many interviews with and talks by Emile on the internet that you may appreciate. Here are just a few:

IN MEMORIAM

Jerrold Post

Dr. Jerrold Post, founding member of ISPP, passed away on November 22, 2020. Many of you have already heard or read about his passing in the news, which is a testament to his larger-than-life presence in this world.

Jerrold Post was born in New Haven, Connecticut, USA in 1934. He completed his B.A. and M.D. at Yale University and his post-graduate training in psychiatry at Harvard Medical School and the National Institute of Mental Health. In 1965, he founded the Central Intelligence Agency's Center for the Analysis of Personality and Political Behavior, and the work he did there profiling world leaders earned him the Intelligence Medal of Merit in 1979 and the Studies in Intelligence Award in 1980. Most notably, he prepared profiles of Egyptian President Anwar Sadat and Israeli Prime Minister Menahem Begin to help President Jimmy Carter navigate the Camp David Accords of 1978. From the CIA, he moved to George Washington University's Elliott School of International Affairs, where he taught his craft for the next thirty years. Over the course of his career, he wrote and edited 11 books, the most recent published only one year ago.

In addition to being one of the founding members of ISPP, Dr. Post enthusiastically championed the Society for more than five decades. He served on the editorial board of Political Psychology since 1987, with his dedication to the journal measurable by the mountains of issues that he kept in his office (and his refusal to get rid of them even after the journal became available online). He served as Vice President from 1994-1996, and won the Nevitt Sanford Award for Distinguished Professional Contributions to Political Psychology in 2002 for his important contributions to the Camp David Accords and long-time excellent work on the psychological assessment of political leaders and on the psychology of terrorism. He was a regular contributor to the annual meetings – it would be hard for most to remember a meeting that he did not attend – and, having worked with him from 2010-2013 and accompanied him to several of those meetings, it was clear that the ISPP community was his intellectual home. Because of him, it is also now mine and that of many others.

Dr. Post's work conveyed his extraordinary intelligence and insight, but anyone who was lucky enough to know him could see that he was also insatiably curious, completely genuine, remarkably kind, and that he had a brilliant sense of humor. He loved telling the story of when he flew to attend a conference on terrorism, accidentally telling security that he was going to a "terrorist convention" and immediately getting shuffled off to the tiny airport interrogation room. There was also the terrifying life-sized Saddam Hussein doll that he stubbornly kept in his office, which was sent to him as a prank by a friend – initially prompting an FBI lockdown and investigation – after he testified in Congress at the time of the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait. Despite dedicating his life to the study of dark and difficult topics, he maintained a lightness and ease that inspired everyone around him.

He was many things to many people. To me, he was a mentor, an advocate, and a friend. He will be missed.

IN MEMORIAM

Jim Sidanius

Jim Sidanius, John Lindsley Professor of Psychology in memory of William James and of African and African American Studies in the departments of Psychology and African and African American Studies at Harvard University, has passed away at age 75. A giant among political psychologists, he was a key contributor not only to the field in general, but also to ISPP in particular—serving variously as a vice president of ISPP, a member of the ISPP Governing Council over multiple terms, and as an editor of the journal Political Psychology.

It is difficult to overestimate the scope of Jim’s contributions as a scholar. His work, as embodied in over 300 scientific papers and four major books, reshaped our understanding of intergroup relations and political attitudes and behavior in group-stratified societies. After receiving his PhD in psychology from the Department of Psychology at the University of Stockholm in 1977, he held appointments at a number of prestigious institutions, including Carnegie-Mellon University, the University of Texas at Austin, New York University, Princeton University, the University of California, Los Angeles, and finally Harvard University. During his lifetime, he received numerous awards and honors that attest to his stature as a giant in the field, including the Gordon Allport Intergroup Relations Prize and the Society for Personality and Social Psychology’s 2013 Career Contribution Award. He was also inducted as a Fellow to the American Academy of Arts and Sciences in 2007, and he was a Fellow in both the Association for Psychological Science and the Society for Experimental Social Psychology.

His accomplishments received particular notice in ISPP, which was always his first and foremost home within social science. Most notably, he received ISPP’s Harold Lasswell Award for distinguished contribution in the field of political psychology in 2006. In further recognition of his accomplishments as a scholar and a mentor to countless students who have gone on to distinguished careers of their own, the International Society of Political Psychology recently renamed its Early Career Achievement Award after him.

Jim contributed to a number of important literatures in social and political psychology over his lifetime, beginning with his work on the nature of political extremism in the 1970s and 1980s. Here, his work on context theory offered an innovative argument: that political extremists actually showed greater cognitive sophistication than centrists on a number of dimensions, since deviating from “safe” moderate positions requires a greater level of skill in defending one’s positions. However, Jim’s most important intellectual contribution was social dominance theory (SDT). Developed in collaboration with Professor Felicia Pratto of the University of Connecticut, SDT is a general model of how group-based hierarchies are developed and reproduced. SDT explicates the personality, ideological, and even biological mechanisms through individual discrimination, institutional discrimination, and power-based asymmetries in group-serving behavior reinforce inequality between groups. Importantly, SDT centers a facet of social life that is more marginal (though not absent) in many other social-psychological perspectives on intergroup relations: group-based power differences. As Jim and his colleagues argued, intergroup conflict is not merely about seeking a positive image for the ingroup or seeking group interest, as important as these things are; rather, it is in large part about competition for group-based dominance.

Among social-psychological theories of intergroup relations, SDT stands out for the scope of its contribution. It is a truly integrative theory, bringing together multiple levels of analysis and perspectives from a wide variety of disciplines—the psychology of individual differences, sociology, and evolutionary biology. Moreover, rather than dismissing the insights of other perspectives, it weaves them into a broader multilevel model of intergroup attitudes and behavior. In this respect, Jim’s most important theoretical contribution helped bring social psychology back to the classical, “big-picture” roots of its founders, and it also helped popularize interest in the evolutionary roots of social behavior among social and political psychologists. SDT is now part of the core “canon” of major theories in the psychological study of intergroup relations, placing it in the same realm as social identity theory and contact theory. In short, Jim’s work is a model of intellectual breadth and integrative imagination that has few peers.

Despite his vast record of accomplishment, he was always humble and generous with students and colleagues alike. Though he expected much of his students, he always did so with deep respect and with complete confidence in their ability to deliver—and he was always ready to provide whatever support his students required along the way. His door was always open, both literally and figuratively.

He will be missed, and his influence will live on.

Early Career Scholars Mentoring Luncheon

Dates: Sunday July 11-Tuesday July 13, as scheduled by Mentors

Locations: As provided by Mentors (online)

Early career scholars and senior mentors with similar fields of interest meet in small groups of three mentees to one mentor during this luncheon. The luncheon is for early career scholars and mentors only. Participants must have received confirmation from those coordinating the Mentoring Luncheon. For 2021, each group will meet in separate virtual sessions as scheduled by their mentors, ideally over the conference dates.

Presidential Address: Why Political Psychology (and ISPP) Benefit from Including Work (and Members) from Varieties of Political Systems, Positions and Locations, Political Cultures, Theories, and Methods
Felicia Pratto (University of Connecticut, USA)

I argue that political psychology has greatly benefited from work that together addresses the enormous variety of political problems faced by people around the world, including those that are universal (e.g., how one gains access to basic needs, how power should be governed) and problems that confront people in different situations (e.g., transitions of governmental forms, war, group exclusion, rapid economic change, de-colonization, external intervention, national dominance). Likewise, I argue that adopting multiple stand-points and research agendas is necessary for us collectively to make our work useful to publics and to further each of our work. Collectively, our use of the assumptions of multiple disciplines and of a variety of research methods is another strong suit of our discipline. I will illustrate these points with research examples of several research teams, and discuss ways that those in our discipline try to confront the difficulties that lack of commonality in theory, stand-point, methods, and epistemological assumptions can pose. Finally, I will summarize some of the work that various ISPP members have done to promote the development of political psychology and our society this year and invite further suggestions and contributions from members in how we can serve one another.

Beyond Recognition, Towards Abolition: Indigenous Theories of Change and Justice in Psychology
Jeffrey Ansloos (University of Toronto, Canada)

For over 500 years, Canada, and European colonial governments which preceded confederation, have enacted settler colonialism against Indigenous nations of Turtle Island. Settler colonialism, as described here, is the super-complex sociopolitical process aimed at occupying Indigenous Peoples' territory and suppressing Indigenous Peoples' comprehensive self-determinism. Regarded as genocide by some, a necro politic by others, settler-colonialism produces a debilitating and violent social order. Since first contact with European settlers, Indigenous peoples have asserted sovereignty and resisted occupation. During the entirety of Canadian confederation, Indigenous peoples have drawn attention to the various abuses of the Canadian government. Through various forms of political participation, non-participation, organizing, direct action, writing, arts, and research, Indigenous peoples have resisted occupation and continued to call for accountability from the Canadian government and demand justice. Across Canadian history, the State's response to these calls for justice have been varied. Dene political scientist, Glen Couldhart (2014) argues that the dominant sociopolitical doctrine of 1960s, liberalism, gave rise to an understanding of justice which has shaped Indigenous and State relations since. Introduced by successive Liberal governments, Canada has sought to quell Indigenous resistance to the settler state through various legislative moves, and policies of enfranchisement, constitutional recognition, and forms of state-sanctioned transitional justice processes, including political advocacy groups, tribunals, commissions, and inquiries. While internationally lauded as progressive social policy by multilateral human rights organizations, these state governed processes have been critiqued by Indigenous scholars and Indigenous rights activists as inherently flawed. Couldhart considers this approach to justice the colonial politics of recognition, and ultimately condemns it. His main contention is that justice for Indigenous peoples cannot be achieved through the process of acknowledgement, and that confining justice to mere accommodation of individual difference or identity reinforces the colonial nation-states' assertion of sovereignty over Indigenous lands and peoples. Other strategies are needed. It is notable that liberalism is the same milieu in which the field of psychology has flourished. As critical psychologist Phillip Cushman (1995) has argued the proliferation of psychology in America rests upon the modernist and capitalist impulses of a neoliberal social order, including an emphasis on individualism and consumerism. Therefore, it is of no surprise that amid ongoing sociopolitical violence against Indigenous peoples evidenced by inequities in almost every social and health indicator, individual recognition of cultural identity and rights has emerged as a dominant theory of justice and change prominent in psychological research and practice. This presentation highlights the ways that Canada uses psychological services, particularly through mental health programming, to both profit off and maintain colonial dominance over Indigenous peoples. Simultaneously, this presentation also points to the limitations of a psychology informed by Indigenousization when it is regarded as mere cultural acknowledgement and accommodation within research and practice. Ultimately, psychologists concerned with Indigenous people's self-determinism must look beyond disciplinary or state recognition for the type of justice needed to unsettle colonial dominance. Such projects are abolitionist in nature. Drawing on abolitionist theory emerging from Indigenous and Black studies, this presentation considers how an abolitionist turn in political psychology might radically reframe the question of justice for Indigenous peoples in psychological research and practice.

Diversifying the Pipeline in Political Science: How Increasing Representation Makes for Better Science

Paula McClain (Duke University, USA)

In an April 27, 2012 presidential column, Douglas L. Medin and Carol D. Lee laid out the two paths that efforts to increase diversity in science fall into two categories—concern for equity and social justice and increasing the pool of scientists prepared to address current contemporary needs in science and technology. The definition of science is broad, so the social sciences are also a concern in both of these areas. But diversifying the social sciences, in my case, political science is not easy. My address will talk about a successful pipeline program, the Ralph Bunche Summer Institute, which has been successful in increasing the number of underrepresented racial and ethnic minorities in political science. In addition, these scholars have posed and answered questions and contributed to a larger body of knowledge in political science that would not have happened without their presence.

Indigenising Psychology: Claiming a Kaupapa Maori Space

Waikaremoana Waitoki (The University of Waikato, New Zealand)

In the 40+ years that Maori have actively participated in psychology as practitioners, academics, students and consumers, the call to resist systemic racism and its colonising agenda has become difficult to ignore. While the psychology profession attempts to address the health inequities that impact on Maori, without a structural shift in power, change will not occur. In response to the need to address local concerns, Māori, like Indigenous peoples the world over, draw from their own cultural systems to seek pathways to flourishing. This keynote describes the growth of Indigenous psychology in New Zealand Aotearoa as a space of self-determination, autonomy and resilience.

ISPP 2022: Democracy as an Achievement: Recognizing Tensions, Challenges, and Aspirations through Political Psychology

Where: Grand Hyatt Athens – Athens, Greece

When: July 14-17, 2022

President: Tereza Capelos (University of Birmingham)

Conference Program Co-Chairs: Dr. Stavroula Chrona (King's College London), Dr. Alexander Theodoridis (University of Massachusetts – Amherst)

Submission Deadline: December 1, 2021

'Democracy is an achievement' noted psychologist Donald Winnicott in 1950 (p.186), a milestone for our societies similar to individual psychic development and maturity. Seeing democracy as an achievement invites us to appreciate that it takes time, requires hard work that is individual and collective, goes hand in hand with responsibility, and like personal development, it is an unfinished project. In essence Democracy as an achievement is a political psychology affair: it involves managing tensions, addressing challenges, enabling growth and supporting aspirations that are simultaneously unique, as well as shared; and it involves processes that take place at the intrapersonal, interpersonal, and socio-political levels.

In the last decade alone, the Great Recession, the challenges of forced migration, issues of security, climate change, the "public knowledge" crisis, pandemics and natural disasters have exacerbated existing rifts and resentments in societies around the globe, and facilitated the rise of populist parties and movements. Current debates on backlash politics and polarizing sentiments often refer to authoritarianism, reactionism, populism, far-right politics, anger, fear, ressentiment, nativism, and collective narcissism as the challenges of our modern societies. Crises of institutional trust, abuses of power by 'omnipotent' leadership, the escalation of intra- and inter-state conflicts, terrorism and the devastation of war test our values of empathy, security and tolerance through violence and greed. The development of democracy in societies around the world is ongoing, and much like individual psychic development, it requires acknowledging frustrations, respecting differences, and seeking pro-social solutions.

Recognizing that political and psychological wellbeing is intertwined, political psychology offers a comprehensive conceptual and empirical investigation of pressing challenges, tensions and crises through interdisciplinary exchange of knowledge and expertise. It brings together scholars from political science, psychology, sociology, ethnic studies, anthropology, history, economics, history, media and communication studies and philosophy who study the intersection of the 'political' and 'psychological', and examine how individuals, groups, institutions and states understand the past, how they appreciate the present, and how they imagine the future.

The theme of the 2022 Scientific meeting of the International Society of Political Psychology (ISPP) is "Democracy as an Achievement: Recognizing Tensions, Challenges, and Aspirations through Political Psychology." Our destination of choice is Athens, Greece, one of the world's oldest cities, with rich heritage, histories and cultures spanning 3,400 years, the birthplace of democracy, and now a cosmopolitan metropolis that is the southernmost capital of Europe.

Our annual meeting offers a stimulating interdisciplinary space to engage in presentations, discussions, networking and potential collaborations. It hosts keynote talks, paper panels, workshops, and roundtables which provide dialectical accounts on diverse methods and perspectives. We particularly welcome students, early career scholars, practitioners and researchers. In addition to academic sessions and social events, we hold mentoring sessions, a "Meet the Editors" panel (of our journal, Political Psychology), the Scholars Under Threat symposium, and the ISPP Academy, our political psychology training program held just prior to the conference.

The call for proposals for individual papers, symposia including several papers, roundtable discussions, and blitz presentations and posters on any topic in political psychology will be available on our ISPP website In October 2021. The submission deadline is 1 December 2021, and presenters will be notified of their submissions' acceptance in February 2022.

Join us in Athens 2022, share your knowledge, engage with political psychologists, and be part of this experience with us.

Coming Soon: The ISPP YouTube Channel

The ISPP leadership team is putting together ISPP's very own channel on YouTube. The ISPP YouTube channel will launch this summer and host educational video content relating to political psychology – select conference and ISPP Academy lectures, guest lectures, interviews, and more.

Watch your e-mail and the ISPP web site for an announcement when our ISPP channel is ready for launch and how you can get involved!

HELP SUPPORT SCHOLARS UNDER THREAT

Academic freedom is under attack in several countries. ISPP has been reaching out in support of our colleagues by offering political advocacy and financial help to scholars under threat. With your generous contributions in 2019 we offered emergency funds to 17 scholars in Turkey. Starting this year, we extend our programs to include scholars under threat from any country, including displaced scholars; therefore, your donations are still needed and gratefully accepted.

Go to <https://ispp.eventsair.com/ispp-members/donmod/Site/Register> to donate, or use the “Scholars Under Threat” button in the conference app.

Applications for funds are kept confidential and reviewed by ISPP’s Scholars Under Threat Committee.

For more information about ISPP’s activities including our New Twinning Program in support of scholars under threat, see https://www.ispp.org/about/scholars\_under\_threat.
